THE POLICE COMMISSION

September 15, 2011

Dear Friends:

Welcome to the Los Angeles Police Department's Inaugural Purple Heart Ceremony. My fellow Commissioners and I were honored to participate in the creation of this very special award, and to see it come to fruition at such a momentous ceremony is extremely gratifying.

While most medals are considered an honor to receive, that may not be the case with the Purple Heart. Actually, the true honor lies with giving the Purple Heart. These recipients are heroes among us who did not hesitate to put themselves on the line to do the right thing. In the face of extreme danger, they opted to forge ahead, pursue justice and protect others. The price for such courage can be very high. While the recipients did not strive to receive this award, their outstanding courage and sense of justice is undeniable. The Purple Heart serves as a small token to show those who have given everything how highly we will always hold them in our thoughts.

With great honor, the Police Commission acknowledges the heroic sacrifice by the recipients at this Inaugural Purple Heart Ceremony.

Warm regards,

CHIEF OF POLICE CHARLIE BECK

September 15, 2011

Dear Friends and Supporters:

On behalf of the men and women of the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD), I want to personally welcome you to the inaugural presentation of the Purple Heart Award ceremony.

This morning, we will honor an extraordinary group of current and former Los Angeles Police Officers who, while in the line of duty, sustained a traumatic injury, were mortally wounded or eventually succumbed to their injuries. Behind each award presented there is a story of selflessness and sacrifice, and behind each story, an officer who made the remarkable choice to put themselves in harm's way to protect their partner, their neighbor, their city. These events, which so profoundly affect the lives of these officers, and their families, will forever be embedded in the history of the LAPD.

I hope that all of you enjoy this groundbreaking event as we pay homage to the recipients of the Los Angeles Police Department's Purple Heart Award. To each recipient, on behalf of the LAPD, I am truly humbled by your dedication to serve and protect.

Very truly yours,

LOS ANGELES POLICE FOUNDATION

September 15, 2011

To our Brothers and Sisters in Blue, their family and friends:

On behalf of the Los Angeles Police Foundation, LAPD's leading support network, it is my honor to welcome you to this momentous event in the history of the Los Angeles Police Department. Today marks the inaugural presentation of LAPD's Purple Heart Award, a recognition no officer seeks to achieve but that many, regrettably because of the sacrifices they had to make, are being accorded.

The Purple Heart is awarded to officers who have sustained grievous physical injury in the line of duty and posthumously to the next of kin of those officers who did not survive their injuries. The Police Foundation is proud to be your host on this solemn occasion which honors the 82 officers whose noble acts of heroism and self-sacrifice, stretching back to 1921, have helped LAPD earn its rightful reputation as the finest police force in the nation. Half made the ultimate sacrifice, laying down their lives to keep us safe. We are inspired by and in awe of the extraordinary courage and dedication of these officers, men and women whose bravery and selfless commitment to duty, to protecting their brethren and fellow citizens, make up the heart and soul of this Department. It is a thin blue line indeed, particularly here in Los Angeles, which has among the lowest number of police officers per capita of any major metropolitan area in the country, and yet this line is as strong as steel, and for that we are ever in your debt.

While the Police Foundation strives to create partnerships that will ensure the continuation of LAPD as a modern police force through training, technology and community outreach, we are humbled and privileged to pay tribute to the officers and their loved ones who have given so much to keep our city safe. At this time of economic hardship, when assaults with a deadly weapon on police officers are up a shocking 35% for the year to date, we are mindful more than ever of the terribly high price you might be asked to pay as you button your uniforms and fasten your Sam Brownes to commence a new tour of duty. We are sobered by the thought that today is not the last day that the Purple Heart will have to be awarded.

Thank you for your courage, your service and your professionalism.

Warm regards,

Mistress of Ceremony

TAMLYN TOMITA

Tamlyn Tomita made her screen debut as Kumiko in "The Karate Kid, Part II" with Ralph Macchio and Pat "Noriyuki" Morita and has since appeared in numerous feature films, television and theatre projects. Keeping herself busy in an industry that has been slow to receive actors of an ethnic demographic, Tamlyn is selective in the roles she chooses, steering away from images that perpetuate stereotypes. She is always searching for ways to create or balance images and stories about Asian Americans and to explore with others in and outside the film and television industry on issues she is concerned about. Having worked on a variety of Asian American projects such as "Starlight Inn", "The Charles Kim Show", "My Life...Disoriented"; "Day of Independence"; "Hundred Percent"; "Life Tastes Good"; "Four Fingers of the Dragon"; "Soundman"; "Requiem" and "Notes on a Scale", Tamlyn proudly supports Asian American filmmakers and artists in the pursuit of giving the world a gallery of portraits from a golden perspective.

Detective Sergeant John Fitzgerald

DETECTIVE SERGEANT JOHN FITZGERALD #228 END OF WATCH: JUNE 21, 1921

On the evening of July 21, 1921, Sergeant John Fitzgerald led a raid on a home that was used as a base of operations for burglaries and contained illegal prohibition era liquor and narcotics. Upon arrival at the house, Sergeant Fitzgerald confronted Philip Alguin on the front porch and was shot through the stomach at 10:30 PM. Although mortally wounded, Fitzgerald chased Alguin about sixty feet before collapsing. Fitzgerald died less than two hours later.

According to the Los Angeles Times, Fitzgerald "was one of the best known and most popular officers on the force." His funeral, described in the Times as "probably the most impressive ceremony ever conducted for a deceased police officer in Los Angeles," attracted such a crowd that nearly 1,000 people were unable to enter the church.

The suspect fled to Mexico and thus began one of the largest manhunts in LAPD history. He was later arrested and returned to Los Angeles where he was convicted of Sergeant Fitzgerald's murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Officer Charles Williams

POLICEMAN CHARLES WILLIAMS #567 END OF WATCH: JANUARY 13, 1923

On January 13, 1923, at approximately 9:30 PM, Policeman Charles P. Williams and his partner Arthur McClanahan were working undercover vice in the area of 6th Street & Central Avenue. The two officers were flagged down by a citizen reporting that a male, black suspect, later identified as John Pryor, was at 1101 E. 8th Street brandishing a revolver and threatening the lives of the residents that lived at the location.

The officers knew this house to be a brothel. It was later discovered that the man was the landlord of the house and had entered to impose a vigilante clean-up of the house by evicting prostitutes. As they were driving there, the police car broke down and Policeman Williams decided to walk the rest of the way. Upon his arrival, he told the man to put his hands up. The suspect fired twice, striking Policeman Williams in the abdomen. A passing truck transported Policeman Williams to a nearby hospital where he died from his wounds.

Policeman Williams is the first known African-American officer to be killed in the line of duty in Los Angeles.

In a highly publicized memorial service, Policeman Charles P. Williams was laid to rest at Evergreen Cemetery on Friday afternoon, January 19, 1923. In attendance were dignitaries from throughout the city and included, as a California Eagle writer would report, "Forty-two of the Department's colored uniformed officers."

City officials designated the downtown intersection of Central Avenue and Sixth Street as Officer Charles P. Williams Square.

PATROLMAN FRANK E. CORLEY #414
END OF WATCH: AUGUST 24, 1924

It was a warm Sunday summer night in 1924, when a group of “professional” men were engaged in a craps game at the rear of Pierson’s Drug Store at 12th Street and Hooper Avenue. One of those men was off-duty LAPD officer Elmer Roberson.

During the game, an argument ensued between Roberson and another gambler, later identified as the gunman, Luther Bryant. The argument escalated into a physical altercation between the two men. Roberson’s firearm fell from his jacket. Bryant recovered the weapon and fired six rounds in Roberson’s direction. Roberson was struck three times by the gunfire.

Hearing the gunfire from the street, Patrolman Frank Corley ran into the drugstore to investigate when he was shot. A doctor who happened upon the scene drove Patrolmen Corley and Roberson to a nearby hospital, although Patrolman Corley died enroute.

Bryant, who had fled on foot from the location, later telephoned and surrendered to police. Two months later in a surprising turn of events, Bryant accepted a plea deal and pled guilty to manslaughter (citing self-defense) and was sentenced to only 10 years in San Quentin State Penitentiary.

Though Patrolman Corley would serve the City only three short years, he earned a reputation for professionalism, receiving numerous commendations for his exemplary service. The year before his untimely death, he was commended by Chief of Police R. Lee Heath for single-handedly capturing an armed bank robber at the Pacific Southwest Bank at 7th St. and Central Ave.

Officer Frank E. Corley

POLICEMAN ARTHUR DAVENPORT BADGE # UNKNOWN
END OF WATCH: MAY 16, 1926

On May 16, 1926, Policeman Arthur Davenport was working patrol assigned to the Lincoln Heights Police Station when he was involved in the pursuit of a drunk driver. Davenport’s partner, F. L. Hartzell, was driving the police vehicle on that fateful Sunday. The other driver, Joe Lomansney, had fled the scene of an earlier traffic collision when he was spotted by the officers in today’s Hollywood Division. As Hartzell and Davenport attempted to initiate a traffic stop at the intersection of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street, Lomansney rammed their vehicle causing it to overturn. Davenport was killed instantly, while Hartzell sustained serious injuries. Lomansney then fled in his vehicle, surrendering five days later. He was ultimately charged with manslaughter.

Policeman Davenport was appointed to the Department on June 1, 1923. His body was transported by train to his hometown of Wilcox, Nebraska, where he was laid to rest.

Officer Arthur Davenport

Officer Paul Donath

POLICEMAN PAUL DONATH BADGE # UNKNOWN
END OF WATCH: APRIL 28, 1932

On April 28, 1932, Policeman Paul Donath and his partner, Policeman Gunby, responded to a radio call that a woman had shot her neighbor at 2645 Marsh St. in Northeast Los Angeles. Upon arriving at the address, Gunby went to the rear of the house while Policeman Donath went to the front door. As soon as the resident, Ella May Thompson, saw Policeman Donath, she shot through the door, striking him in the chest and inflicting a mortal wound. Gunby ran to his aid, dragging him to the lawn next door and sent a call for an ambulance and backup. LAPD forced Ms. Thompson, age 29, from her home with tear gas and had to shoot her when she opened fire on the officers.

Officer Russel Leidy

POLICEMAN RUSSELL LEIDY BADGE # UNKNOWN
END OF WATCH: JULY 24, 1934

On the evening of July 24, 1934, Harry Wilson and Paul McDonald held up a café and got away with $5. They moved on to another café, where they told the owner and a restaurant patron as they were leaving, "We're the new Dillingers and we're plenty tough." The restaurant patron happened to be Officer Merle Parmele who was off-duty and in plainclothes. Parmele raced after the men and fired several shots as they got in their car. LAPD Sgt. Edwards, who happened to be nearby, joined in the gunfight between Parmele and the robbers.

During the chase, Wilson and McDonald wrecked their car and then stole the car of Johnny Myers, who happened to be parking in a nearby alley.

Policeman Leidy and his partner, Officer Owen Tucker, got the radio call as they cruised the area and stopped the robbers at 33rd St. and Stanford Ave. The officers got out of the car, and Leidy asked Wilson, "What have you got in there?" Wilson fired several shots, killing Leidy as Tucker opened fire at the robbers.

Myers, the innocent owner of the stolen car, was wounded and fell out of the car, pleading with Tucker not to shoot him as McDonald and Wilson escaped. By this time, a large number of officers had responded to the call making it easier to arrest Wilson and McDonald who were found hiding nearby.

On Aug. 25, 1934, Wilson was convicted of killing Leidy and sentenced to life at San Quentin. McDonald was convicted of robbery, but found not guilty in Leidy's death.

POLICEMAN WALTER H. KESTERSON #1125
END OF WATCH: FEBRUARY 2, 1946

On February 4, 1946, at approximately 8:45PM, Gus Boyd and Nathaniel Cooper committed an armed robbery of a movie theater in the area of South L.A. The suspects fled the location and an initial crime broadcast was sent out to all police cars describing the suspects and their route of travel.

At 9:00PM, Metropolitan Division Officers Walter H. Kesterson and E. W. Patrick were conducting crime suppression duties in the area of 43rd Place and Avalon Boulevard when they observed suspects that matched the description of the suspects involved in the robbery. The officers decided to pull over the suspects for questioning. Kesterson, who was the passenger officer, jumped out of the police vehicle and attempted to detain the two individuals. Cooper reached into his jacket pocket, and a scuffle ensued between him and Kesterson. Cooper removed a .38 Caliber Revolver and fired at Kesterson, striking him in the upper torso. Kesterson, despite sustaining a mortal wound, returned fire, killing Cooper. Concurrently, Boyd was also in the process of removing a handgun from his pocket when Kesterson shot him. EMTs responded to the scene where both suspects were pronounced dead.

Kesterson was transported to the Georgia Street Receiving Hospital, where he succumbed to his injuries and died upon arrival.

Policeman Kesterson was posthumously awarded the Department's Medal of Valor award in 2007. He was the first Metropolitan Division officer killed in the line of duty.

Officer Walter H. Kesterson

POLICEMAN RICHARD KENT #7169
END OF WATCH: DECEMBER 8, 1960

On the evening of December 8, 1960, Policemen Richard Kent and L. Jeff Poor were assigned to work the felony car, a plainclothes assignment in an unmarked car. Since Policeman Poor had driven the night before, Policeman Kent drove on this particular evening while Poor kept the books.

The batteries in Kent's flashlight were low, so he decided to stop at the Lucky Auto Parts store to purchase new batteries while Poor waited in the car. Kent, however, unknowingly walked into an armed robbery in progress. A gun battle with the robber ensued mortally wounding Policeman Kent who managed to wound the robber before succumbing to his own injuries. His partner, in the car outside, was responding to the gunshots when he encountered the wounded robber escaping. He chased him capturing him and his getaway driver.

Policeman Richard Kent

Policeman Ian Campbell

POLICEMAN IAN CAMPBELL #10046
END OF WATCH: MARCH 9, 1963

On March 9, 1963, Policemen Ian Campbell and Karl Hettinger pulled over a car containing two suspicious-looking men in the Hollywood area. The two men, Jimmy Lee Smith (aka "Jimmy Youngblood") and Gregory Ulas Powell, had recently committed a string of robberies. Powell, the driver, pulled a gun on Campbell and ordered Hettinger to surrender his gun to Smith. The two officers were then forced into Powell's car and driven to an onion field near Bakersfield where Campbell was shot execution style. Hettinger was able to escape, running nearly four miles to reach a farmhouse for assistance.

Powell was sentenced to death, but later had the sentence commuted to life. He remains in prison to this day. Smith was also sentenced to life in prison, but was paroled in 1982. In 2007, Smith was found on LA's Skid Row and taken into custody for parole violations. He died in prison that same year. The tragic events of March 9, 1963, served as the subject for the non-fiction book (and film adaptation) The Onion Field.

Officer Roger Warren

POLICEMAN ROGER WARREN #13163
END OF WATCH: MAY 8, 1967

Assigned to the Van Nuys Division, Policeman Roger Warren was shot and killed by a sniper while on duty on May 8, 1967. He was on patrol when his training officer observed someone crouched behind a stone BBQ pit and decided to investigate. When the training officer exited the vehicle, a gunshot was heard. A round from a .308 rifle struck Policeman Warren in the armpit. The suspect was a 16-year-old thought to be seeking revenge on a liquor store manager who had a friend of the suspect arrested for shoplifting earlier in the day. It is also believed the suspect's intentions for the manager were interrupted by Policeman Warren and his training officer. The suspect was shot and killed by the training officer and an off-duty police officer from across the street. Policeman Warren was transported to the hospital where he was pronounced dead as a result of the gunshot wound.

Policeman Warren was just 23 years-old and graduated from the Police Academy only two weeks before he was killed.

Officer Gary Murakami

OFFICER GARY MURAKAMI #14036
END OF WATCH: SEPTEMBER 9, 1968

Officer Gary Murakami was shot and killed on September 9, 1968, while he and his partner answered a call of a disturbance involving a nude man knocking on doors on West 60th Street. As the officers approached the front door of the suspect's apartment, they had to pass in front of a window. As they did so, the suspect opened fire with a .410 gauge shotgun, striking Officer Murakami in the head. The suspect was killed by other officers at the scene who returned fire. Officer Murakami was transported to a local hospital where he succumbed to the wound during surgery. The shooting took place on Officer Murakami's first call on his second day out of the academy. His unit had just been released from roll call when he was dispatched on the call.

Officer Murakami was the first Asian American police officer killed in the line of duty in the United States. Murakami excelled at the Academy and graduated in the top 10 of his class. In 2007, he was honored with the Spirit of Los Angeles award at the opening ceremony for Asian Pacific American Heritage Month.

POLICEMAN ROBERT COTE #13991
END OF WATCH: JULY 31, 1969

Policeman Robert Cote was shot and killed by a robbery suspect on July 31, 1969, while responding to a robbery in-progress call where armed suspects had taken the employees of a Woolworth's department store hostage. He entered the store before back-up arrived and was shot by one of the suspects in the femoral artery while searching the store. Policeman Cote, although wounded, exited the store, but died while being transported to Central Receiving Hospital in downtown Los Angeles. The suspect was shot and killed by responding officers.

Policeman Cote's death changed the way calls for wounded police officers and firefighters were handled. The old system of a police/fire ambulance being dispatched from the old City-operated Central Receiving Hospital (located where the LAPD Rampart Station now sits) city-wide to handle injured/wounded police and fire personnel was stopped. After Policeman Cote's death, injured officers and firefighters were taken by ambulance to the nearest emergency room for critical care.

Policeman Robert Cote

POLICEMAN JERRY MADDOX #14317
END OF WATCH: AUGUST 19, 1969

Hollenbeck Area Policeman Jerry Maddox was killed on August 19, 1969, while patrolling the Pico Gardens housing project. Maddox stopped to investigate a party attended by approximately 18 to 24 youths. As the officers approached the location, one of the partygoers ran from police. Maddox chased the man down a narrow driveway and was handcuffing him when someone shot him in the back.

The suspect, a 16-year-old who had a very lengthy juvenile record, was convicted of Policeman Maddox's murder.

Officer Jerry Maddox

POLICEMAN CHARLES CARACCILO #10285
END OF WATCH: JUNE 21, 1973

On June 21, 1973, Policeman Charles Caraccilo, a motorcycle officer assigned to the Van Nuys Division, made a routine stop of a motorist and approached with the intent to warn or cite for a traffic violation. As Caraccilo approached the stopped vehicle, the driver, later suspected of auto theft, fired six shots. Although Caraccilo was wearing a bulletproof vest, his first instinct was to turn sideways and draw his weapon. In doing so, one of the bullets entered under the armpit area striking Caraccilo in the heart. Despite this fatal injury, Policeman Caraccilo was able to fire several shots at the suspect before collapsing in the driveway across the street.

The shooter, Michael Patrick Hunter, age 21, had escaped from the California Youth Authority in northern California where he was serving time for other felony crimes. Hunter was found guilty of second-degree murder and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Policeman Caraccilo had served with the Los Angeles Police Department for 14 years.

Officer Charles Caraccilo

Officer Vincent Leusch

OFFICER VINCENT LEUSCH #16208
END OF WATCH: SEPTEMBER 22, 1975

Officer Vincent Leusch of Southwest Division responded to a call to assist other LAPD Officers involved in a pursuit on September 12, 1975. As told by a reporter in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, "the high speed ...wild bullet-punctuated chase" proceeded through the streets of Los Angeles for eight miles and ended in Inglewood. Numerous police and motorcycle officers responded to the pursuit while the suspects drove wildly and without regard for public safety. During the pursuit, the suspects sideswiped two private vehicles and at least two other police vehicles causing injuries to LAPD officers.

Officer Leusch's vehicle approached the stolen vehicle from the opposite direction. He stopped his patrol car and positioned himself with a shotgun behind the open door of the car. The speeding, stolen vehicle rammed the patrol car hurling him 40 feet away. Shortly after, police stopped the vehicle in Inglewood where the juvenile suspects were arrested.

Officer Leusch was transported to Daniel Freeman Hospital and underwent surgery. He lost a leg and was paralyzed from the neck down and died 10 days later on September 22, 1975, as a result of his injuries.

The officers forced their way into the home when a man inside opened fire. Despite his wound, Hicks returned fire, wounding one of the suspects.

Six people, including two women, were booked by Inglewood police for investigation of murder.

Hicks later died at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital. His death brought about the issuance of the LAPD raid jackets and the use of body armor.

Officer David Bailey

The suspect then fled in his vehicle, leaving the victim behind, and a vehicle pursuit ensued. A contact team was formed to extricate the suspect from his vehicle.

As the officers approached, the suspect started his vehicle and rapidly accelerated backward toward the officers. Sergeant Jauregui was struck by the vehicle and was propelled, causing him to land on his back. The suspect was eventually taken into custody, and Sergeant Jauregui required surgery for his injury. The injuries he sustained as a result continue to cause him problems to this day.

DETECTIVE ARLEIGH MCCREE #12241
OFFICER RONALD BALL #15323
END OF WATCH: FEBRUARY 8, 1986

Detective Arleigh McCree, the Officer in Charge of the Firearms and Explosives Unit, and Officer Ronald Ball were killed on February 8, 1986, while attempting to defuse two pipe bombs. The officers, both members of the Bomb Squad, were called to a home in North Hollywood that was being searched in connection with a shooting. The officers conducting the search found a gun in the garage and also stumbled upon two pipe bombs. The Bomb Squad was called to the scene. While examining the devices, the officers determined that the bombs were live and booby-trapped and moved all of the other officers away from the scene. The officers began to diffuse the bombs by hand when the devices detonated. Detective McCree was killed instantly.

Detective McCree was a counter-terrorism specialist and was widely recognized as one of the top explosive experts in the world. McCree investigated the Symbionese Liberation Army bomb making operations in 1976 and was part of the bomb squad that investigated the Marine barracks bombing in Beirut, Lebanon in 1983. McCree also headed the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics bomb squad and wrote a text on explosive devices. In 1982, he testified before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Security and Terrorism about the concern that government manuals on how to make bombs were too easy for terrorists to get.

After the untimely deaths of their husbands, Edie McCree and Ann Ball established a non-profit memorial fund in honor of Arleigh and Ron. The purpose of the Memorial Fund is to supplement the Los Angeles Police Department's efforts in providing equipment and to assist in research and training for personnel assigned to the LAPD's Bomb Squad.

Responding to a police radio call for officer assistance, Pagliotti stepped out of his car, identified himself as a police officer and then took cover behind the car.

As he exchanged shots with one of the suspects, his car, which had been left in gear, rolled forward, exposing him to his assailant, investigators said. He was mortally wounded in the chest. Although hit, Pagliotti fired 14 shots, wounding one suspect, Louis Belvin, Jr., age 17. He and the other suspect, Thomas Lee Mixon, 19, were later captured. Pratt and his partner went to investigate. Pratt and DeLao spotted a car matching the description of the car used in the drive-by shooting and began following the vehicle. The car ended up at a gas station, so Pratt and DeLao parked their car and were about to exit their squad car when the suspects' vehicle made a sudden U-turn, drove directly at the officers and began firing at them with an assault rifle. As the officers returned fire, an assault rifle round struck Officer Pratt in the face, killing him instantly. The suspects fled the scene.

Both suspects turned themselves in one month later, after being featured on America's Most Wanted. The shooter was sentenced to two life sentences without the possibility of parole, and the driver (a 17-year-old female with no record) was sentenced to 25 years to life with possibility of parole.

Upon requesting back-up, he moved into an alley for a better view and observed a group of males standing in a rear yard. Sergeant Richards identified himself as a police officer and asked the group about the gunfire. One of the males turned toward Sergeant Richards and shot at him, missing. Fearing for his life, he fired two rounds at the suspect, striking him in the face, and took cover behind a car in the alley. Detective Jon Hurd

DETECTIVE JON HURD #25719
DETECTIVE RICHARD HOUSEHOLDER #26571
INCIDENT DATE: FEBRUARY 3, 1991

When Officers John Hurd and Richard Householder stopped a vehicle near Vineland Avenue and Burbank Boulevard on the evening of February 3, 1991, they were vigilant. They had seen the Ford auto with Ohio license plates run a 3-way traffic signal. However, more important, to the officers was the license number. Through a radio check, the officers learned that a different car with California license plates with the same license number as the Ford had been used in an armed robbery in Burbank. The officers, made wary by the "coincidence" of the identical license numbers, remained by their patrol vehicle as they ordered the driver to leave his car and move to the sidewalk.

Detective Richard Householder

Officer Hurd approached the man in order to "pat him down" while partner Householder stood guard. However, the caution of the officers wasn't enough. In an instant, the suspect whirled around, pulled a large .44-caliber handgun from his waistband, and fired directly into Officer Hurd's chest. Fortunately, the officer's bulletproof vest deflected the bullet through his shoulder, where it exited under his arm.

The gunman then changed his aim. This time he fired at Officer Householder, where the bullet hit him in the shoulder, but deflected into his neck. The bullet had the power to spin the officer around, so that when the suspect fired again, his second bullet hit Officer Householder in the back. Fortunately, the second bullet was stopped by the officer's bulletproof vest. Though seriously wounded, the officers drew their weapons and returned fire, driving the suspect to seek cover. They followed him, fearing that the gunman might reload to continue the fight or escape.

Officer Hurd radioed for help, as he and his partner continued to fire from cover behind parked cars. When his partner's gun emptied, Officer Householder stepped into the open to draw the gunman's attention while Officer Hurd reloaded. Both officers fired at the suspect until he fell to the ground, mortally wounded.

Although severely wounded and facing imminent death, each officer chose to confront and expose himself to the gunman's fire in order to protect his partner.

OFFICER TINA KERBRAT #27606
END OF WATCH: FEBRUARY 11, 1991

Officer Tina Kerbrat was shot and killed on February 11, 1991, just four months after graduating from the Police Academy after she and her partner, Officer Earl Valladares, made a routine stop in Sun Valley to question two men suspected of drinking in public. Valladares, a training officer, wanted to give Kerbrat experience writing a citation for an open-container violation, something Officer Kerbrat had never done before. Before the officers could exit their patrol car, one of the men immediately approached from the rear and opened fire, striking Officer Kerbrat in the face. Unaware that Officer Kerbrat had been shot, Officer Valladares returned fire, killing the suspect. He then trained his gun on the second suspect, put out an emergency call, handcuffed the second suspect and walked back to the patrol car. It was only then that he realized his partner had been shot. Officer Kerbrat was the first Los Angeles Police Department female officer killed in the line of duty.

Created in memory of Officer Kerbrat, the Tina Kerbrat Award is presented to an LAPD recruit deemed "most inspirational" upon graduation from the Police Academy.

END OF WATCH: JUNE 13, 1991

On June 13, 1991, Air Support Division Officers Gary Howe and Charles "Randy" Champe were in-flight in Air 12 when they experienced sudden engine failure. Howe and Champe sought the nearest open space into which they could safely land, which happened to be a schoolyard filled with children playing. Unwilling to risk young lives, the officers now guided their dropping aircraft to a secondary and risky street intersection. They were able to maneuver their craft between power-pole lines beneath them. With time running out, they suddenly found their secondary landing site a risk as a crossing guard and small child were crossing the street in the path of the crippled airship. Officers Champe and Howe maneuvered their helicopter to avoid hitting the crossing guard and child. The falling airship struck a light standard and crashed nose first to the ground. Officers Champe and Howe perished.

Officer Champe was a Vietnam Veteran and had been with the LAPD for 17 years. He was posthumously awarded the Medal of Valor in 1991.

INCIDENT DATE: JUNE 2, 1995

On June 2, 1995, Officer Scott DeFoe and his partner were working Wilshire Area Vice. The officers' investigation focused on blatant prostitution and gang-related activity in the surrounding area. As the officers were driving east in an unmarked car on Washington Boulevard near Arlington Avenue, they observed a suspect "tagging" on a wall. Officer DeFoe suddenly felt his head snap back, and realized that he had been shot in the mouth and was bleeding profusely.

Officer DeFoe's partner managed to fire one round toward the muzzle flash. Unfortunately, Officer DeFoe was not in a position to return fire, so he elected to exit the vehicle to pinpoint the source of gunfire. His partner immediately put out the broadcast for help, and numerous officers responded to the location. Several gang members were arrested for the attempted murder of both officers. Robbery-Homicide Detectives determined that between five to eight armed gang members were "lying in wait" as their fellow member spray painted the wall in rival gang territory.

INCIDENT DATE: FEBRUARY 28, 1997

On Friday, February 28, 1997, the Los Angeles Police Department experienced a day of terror and remarkable heroism. The North Hollywood Bank Shootout will long be remembered as one of the country's most shocking displays of criminal behavior and an outstanding example of professional, heroic law enforcement. On this day, two men in full body armor held up a bank and then proceeded to shower a North Hollywood community with hundreds of armor-piercing AK-47 rounds. Miraculously, no one was killed.

Officer William Lantz

North Hollywood officers were on patrol when they observed two suspects wearing ski masks and armed with assault rifles walking toward a Bank of America. They were walking single file and appeared to force a citizen toward the front doors of the bank. As the suspects entered the bank, officers believed an armed robbery was in progress. The officers then heard the sound of gunfire from inside the bank and immediately broadcast a robbery call. The suspects emerged from the bank armed with assault weapons and began firing toward officers that had arrived on-scene. Officers returned fire at the suspects.

Detective Conrado Torrez

Police personnel engaged the heavily armed suspects wearing body armor, and it was determined that during the 17-minute gun battle, the suspects fired at least 424 rounds at Department personnel. Officers suffered gunshot wounds to various degrees, but each officer wounded also suffered great psychological traumatic injury years after the shooting. One suspect was eventually mortally wounded, and the other who was severely wounded was pronounced dead at the location.

Realizing there would be a delay in the arrival of SWAT, the officers initiated a plan to rescue the Glendale detective. Several attempts were made to rescue the downed officer and each attempt was met with gunfire by the suspect. Officer Bella and the rescue team entered the warehouse. The suspect then fired several rounds striking Officer Bella and Officer Foster. Immediately the rescue and cover teams regrouped and pulled the wounded officers to safety.

DETECTIVE CYNTHIA FRENCH #23988
INCIDENT DATE: DECEMBER 31, 1998

On December 31, 1998, North Hollywood Area Officer Cynthia French and her partner responded with other officers to investigate a radio call of an intoxicated, mentally unstable man with a gun causing a disturbance at a Studio City apartment complex. The officers searched the area and entered the suspect's apartment, unable to locate the armed individual. They did observe several assault rifle cases and several hundred rounds of ammunition.

Later that evening, a second call for service was received from the security guard at the complex, alerting officers that the suspect had returned to his apartment. Officers responded to assist and a tactical plan was formulated. The officers called the suspect in an effort to get him to leave his apartment unarmed. When he refused, the officers knocked on the front door with the same request. The suspect opened the door, but then closed the door and began loading his weapons. The suspect then opened the door and exited the apartment to confront officers. Realizing the suspect's superior firepower, the officers were directed to redeploy as Officer French provided cover. The suspect then discharged numerous rounds at the officers. Officer French ordered him to put the gun down. The suspect continued to advance on Officer French. Fearing for her safety and the safety of the community, she engaged the suspect in gun battle. OFFICER DONA ADOLPHI #32426
INCIDENT DATE: JULY 7, 2002

On July 7, 2002, Newton Area officers responded to an "officer needs help" call. An officer-involved shooting had just occurred, and the suspect was now in control of a police vehicle. Officer Dona Adolphi and his partner entered the northbound Harbor Freeway and observed another Newton patrol unit following the suspect. During the altercation, Officer Adolphi heard another officer yell that the suspect had grabbed his gun. Officer Adolphi attempted to restrain the suspect's head and upper torso. He knew his actions provided additional time to keep the suspect from pulling the trigger. Officer Adolphi heard several shots being fired and only relinquished his hold on the suspect once he had been shot. Officers fired shots to stop the uncontrollable suspect and ended the life threatening situation.

Officer Adolphi was transported to the hospital for medical treatment of his gunshot wound.
